FUND ADVISER'S REPORT

The strategy's annualised daily volatility profile continued to trend lower

It is pleasing to report that the portfolio delivered a positive return for a fifth consecutive month while broader equity markets performed poorly in May. The Fund returned 0.52% during the period (C Acc GBP) and the strategy's annualised daily volatility profile continued to trend lower.

Portfolio activity was relatively muted compared with the prior month. However, the Fund participated in new equity raises from Gresham House Energy Storage and Greencoat UK Wind at attractive levels versus market prices. In addition, a new position was taken in Aquila European Renewables Income via an Initial Public Offering. Aquila will invest in a diversified portfolio of onshore wind, solar and hydro assets located predominantly in Continental Europe and Scandinavia. The Adviser to the company, Aquila Capital, has transacted 3.8 GW of renewables capacity and has access to a sizeable pipeline of assets. The newly launched vehicle targets full investment within 12 months and aims to deliver total returns in the range of 6-7.5% per annum.

Aquila is the second vehicle to launch in a UK closed-end structure with a focus on non-UK, non-GBP renewable energy assets. Not only does this launch serve to increase the investible universe for the Fund but it does so by expanding the range of companies in the Adviser's preferred structure. The long-term, contracted cash flows derived from renewable energy assets lend themselves to a discounted cash flow model from which a useful net asset value is derived. The availability of a reference net asset value is a key benefit for investors and tends to result in more stable share prices.

Globally, the political backdrop remains benign in relation to the renewables sector. Recent elections in Australia saw the Conservative coalition hold power, which is likely to mean that existing energy policies will be left unchanged and within this support for the large-scale renewable energy target will be maintained. While in the UK – a region to which the Fund is materially exposed – the political backdrop is fairly unstable, the Adviser is of the belief that the 'green agenda', which is underpinned by legally binding commitments over emission reductions, is unlikely to be targeted by any government and that related subsidies and policy support would not be tampered with.

The Fund will declare its second quarter income distribution at the end of June. Unit holders will receive payments one month in arrears.
