Monthly Commentary (May 2025)

May saw capital markets move back towards a far more "risk on" position, as concerns over trade tensions eased somewhat. That said, there continue to be real concerns about government balance sheets in many parts of the world, and particularly in the US, UK and Japan. There is also scope for inflation to remain high, and for global growth to be impacted by a rather different trading environment, even if the very worst fears thrown up by "liberation day" prove unfounded.

The fund remained fairly close to fully invested throughout the month, positioned in 15 of our 17 silos. This saw the fund up 1.6% through the month. Our signals took us out of US equities, which did perform well in the month, but we are not unduly concerned given where US equity valuations and earnings expectations are, and with many market commentators advocating a rotation into regional equity markets with so many portfolios still so heavily concentrated in US equities.

The fund has long positions in all of our equity silos outside of the US, including in emerging markets, which could serve us well should an increasing number of investors decide to moderate their US exposure in favour of other equity markets.

In terms of fixed income markets, corporate and higher yield bonds seem a better place to be than in the sovereign bonds of countries, given how weak the fiscal position of so many of them is. This is aligned with our positioning. As the year goes on, let us hope that the world continues to "muddle through", particularly with respect to world trade.

Key Risks

- Counterparty risk: The Fund can conclude various transactions with contractual partners. If a contractual partner becomes insolvent, it can no longer or can only partly settle unpaid debts owed to the Fund.
 - Market Risk: External factors can cause an entire asset class to decline in value which would result in a decrease in the value of investments. The Fund aims to mitigate this risk by investing in all major asset classes in many geographic regions and owning assets which are often negatively correlated.
 - Concentration Risk: The Fund seeks to minimise concentration risk by owning
- a wide selection of Exchange Traded Funds which themselves own many hundreds of underlying assets.
- Liquidity Risk: adverse market conditions may affect the ability to sell certain assets when necessary. The Fund invests nearly exclusively in large, liquid ETFs so liquidity risk should be significantly lower than in a more conventional actively managed fund investing in single assets.
