Monthly Commentary (May 2026)

After April's sharp rebound, markets pushed higher again in May, perhaps partly as a function of a potential thawing in the geopolitical backdrop. A credible attempt at a US-Iran agreement emerged in the month and, although talks were still live at the month end, hopes of an end to the conflict grew. Oil, fell back below $100 with the prospect of the Strait of Hormuz reopening.

With the worst of the energy shock seemingly easing, bond yields fell back after spiking earlier in the month and equities stayed remarkably calm. Once again it was emerging markets that led the way, with Korea and Taiwan posting another extraordinary month thanks to their central role in the AI and semiconductor supply chain. Growth continued to beat value. In a mirror image of April, commodities gave back ground as energy and precious metals fell. The strength that cushioned us in March became a modest drag this month as oil retreated and gold came off with it.

With our heavy weighting towards emerging markets firmly on the right side of the move, however, the fund added 3.7% in May, more than offsetting the pullback in commodities and gold. That takes us to +8.2% for the year with the fund now having more than recovered the ground lost in March.

Going forwards a fair bit of good news now looks priced in, particularly in equities, and much still hinges on whether the fall in the oil price proves durable but we will hope that markets will continue to move along on the back of fairly solid earnings fundamentals.

Should this not be the case, our trend following overlay and diversification should continue to give us a measure of downside protection as ever.

Key Risks

- Counterparty risk: The Fund can conclude various transactions with contractual partners. If a contractual partner becomes insolvent, it can no longer or can only partly settle unpaid debts owed to the Fund.
 - Market Risk: External factors can cause an entire asset class to decline in value which would result in a decrease in the value of investments. The Fund aims to mitigate this risk by investing in all major asset classes in many geographic regions and owning assets which are often negatively correlated.
 - Concentration Risk: The Fund seeks to minimise concentration risk by owning a wide selection of Exchange Traded Funds which themselves own many hundreds of underlying assets.
 - Liquidity Risk: adverse market conditions may affect the ability to sell certain assets when necessary. The Fund invests nearly exclusively in large, liquid ETFs so liquidity risk should be significantly lower than in a more conventional actively managed fund investing in single assets.
